On December 10th the Star Theatre was thrown open to an audience that enjoyed it to the fullest extent. The Welch-Christensen Company and Edna Means was the attraction. Two of them sang a Japanese duet while one performed at the piano. It was well they told us in advance for we didn't then nor or we any wiser yet on the subject.

We were entertained with several recitations by Miss Means, chief among which was the boys composition on cows.

For one and a half hours they kept the audience in fine humor. We hope they will come our way again. You will always find something good at the lyceum. J. M. H.

Daughters Aid Southern Farmers to Diversify Crops

Washington, D. C., Dec. 21—Daughters of Southern farmers, who have been members of the United States Department of Agriculture's garden and canning clubs have been able to give their fathers practical demonstrations of the value of crop diversification during the present bad cotton year. The actual products which the girls have put up are proving an invaluable asset in many farm homes where the cotton crop has not brought the customary returns and many farmers are now substituting whole acres of onions and tomatoes in place of cotton after seeing the success which the young women have made with these crops.

A conference of the women and agents from 15 Southern States is in progress in the United States Department of Agriculture's Office of Experimentation and Demonstration Work in the South. Fifty women agents are present, each representing a state in addition to the members who have charge of the work. These agents supervise the work of 360 county agents who direct the work of 33,420 girls. Data of some of the State reports given here is merely an indication of the general interest that is being taken more and more throughout the whole South in club-movement work.

TENNESSEE GIRL DIVERSIFIES CROPS

Madge Farrar has proved the possibilities of growing crops all the year round in her State. By raising and selling vegetables throughout the year she made a net profit of $131.62, while the second best girl, who also did good work but did not diversify, made $96.20 profit. The girl with the second average grew only beans and tomatoes during the fall and summer. Miss Farrar, however, having grown these crops put in onions during the winter which she sold at a good profit early in February. She then proceeded to plant cabbages which brought her an income during April and May, while peas were her main crop in June. This brought her back to the tomato and bean season and rounded out a year of profitable vegetable growing.

Another young woman found a peach orchard into which hogs had been turned. She took her canner with her and established herself in the orchard to save what was left from the hogs, and made $60 in one week from her work. Similar instances have demonstrated the possibilities of saving waste in that section and there has been a more general interest exhibited not only by the farmers' daughters but by many of their wives.

FIG POSSIBILITIES IN SOUTH MISSISSIPPI

Although the area where figs will grow in this country is extremely limited, in certain sections of Southern Mississippi this fruit grows so plentifully that its value is not appreciated and barrels of figs go to waste every year. Under the conditions that exist in dooryards and gardens the trees require little or no cultivation and the majority of owners eat a few, can a few for home use, and permit the rest to go to waste, except in localities where commercial canners are prepared to buy the fruit from day to day as it ripens.

During the past year two counties of Southern Mississippi decided to specialize in canning figs. One girl packed 500 pints which she sold for from 35 cents to 40 cents a pint. The girls in these sections are now leaving tomatoes for other less fortunate districts where figs will not grow and are planting six fig trees on their tenth-acre formerly planted to the other crop. The demand for this product from the figless section is far beyond the supply.

Four years ago there were but two counties in Mississippi where organized garden and canning club work was carried on for the girls; the next year there were twelve counties; the next twenty-three, and during the next there were thirty-five counties organized.

Pimentoes have proved a particular boon in certain counties in South Carolina as have figs in Mississippi. Certain clubs which had been specializing on tomatoes decided that there was a possibility in pimentoes, which are not so generally grown and which are canned in practically no other parts of this country, the main canned product here being imported from Spain and Mexico. Since the product of these young women has been put on the market, requests have come from 45 States for information regarding the canning and culture of this valuable food product which the American people in general do not yet understand.

The total profit of all the South Carolina club girls for the past year was over $28,000. Every agent who assists the girls is a college graduate who has received special domestic-science training. Home demonstration work is a feature, the motto being "Do one thing at a time." There was, for instance, a homemade fireless-cooker campaign which lasted for three days in one section and resulted in a hundred homemade cookers being put into use. A fly-trap campaign is to be the next in order, and after that a buttermaking campaign.

THE VALUE OF A NAME IN NORTH CAROLINA

Two sisters in North Carolina have established such a reputation for their canned fruits and vegetables that they cannot fill the demand. The rules of the agent in charge of the North Carolina work makes it necessary that the name and address of every club member go on every can he puts on the market. "Give me a can of Mabel Norris tomatoes," or "Give me a can of Agnes Norris peaches" requests the housewife of the grocer in the section where these two sisters sell their products. These young women no longer put up their product in glass, but tins, their name on the outside being sufficient guarantee for the appearance of the product.

The North Carolina girls are being taught to be business women as well as to put up superior products. The State leaders, when they first interested the girls in the work, attempted to find markets for them, but as more girls join the clubs this is impossible, and each girl is taught to get out among the housewives and dealers of her neighborhood, and make her own market. Similarly, in Mississippi "Marketing committees" are organized by the girls themselves and club members in one section put those of another section in touch with possible markets for their goods.
